The Hope of Humanity

An Editorial

Twenty years of the triumph of the great October Socialist Revolution in Russia have just been celebrated.

To the American people the joyous demonstrations of that greatest achievement in all human history have an extraordinary and deep significance.

The Union of Socialist Soviet Republics jubilantly acclaimed its unsurpassed and marvelous Socialist accomplishments at a time when war without and economic depression within continued to threaten the American people.

In the U.S.S.R. 170,000,000 people happily greeted the aims of unbounded economic and cultural progress of peace, of the advance to higher stages of human democracy through a new form of government, the Soviet type, which has made possible Socialist development.

To the American people the Soviet Union on its 20th birthday marching uninterruptedly to greater progress, invincibly powerful in its own defense, presented the strongest friend and guarantor of collective action to secure world peace to mankind.

The American people can see in the Soviet Constitution the explicit, written guarantee of a happy life for the Soviet people. The Stalin Constitution embodies in writing conditions that already exist. It embodies those guarantees of liberty, the right to work, security from unemployment, and the conditions for happy development of all peoples of which the greatest thinkers of mankind have dreamed for ages.
